Exvere Notes Financial Closing of Global Aerosystems, LLC Transaction

Seattle, WA- Exvere, Inc. announced today that its client Global Aerosystems, LLC, Mukilteo, Washington completed the previously announced transaction in which Global was acquired by Kaman Corporation (NASDAQ: KAMN). Global Aerosystems was founded in 2006 and provides design, analysis, product development, fleet support, modifications and FAA certification services to the aerospace industry. Kaman, headquartered in Bloomfield, Connecticut conducts business in the aerospace and industrial distribution markets. The company also produces and/or markets proprietary aircraft bearings and components; including complex metallic and composite aerostructures.

Chuck Rhoden, Chairman and CEO of Global said "We are extremely pleased to join the Kaman family by merging engineering and FAA certification capabilities into the expansive Kaman manufacturing and product development capacity to increase our market footprint. This transaction not only provides liquidity for our shareholders but tremendous career development opportunities for our many deserving employees."

Michael Brustkern, Managing Director of Exvere noted that "this involved a global marketing process with final bids coming from prospective acquirers in China, India and France in addition to Kaman. We have been extremely impressed with both the personal and professional approach of Kaman which we believe bodes well for the future success of this venture."
